

Final Test — C2 Exit Check

The end-of-course check on all eight modules, taken on the last day, which is also a celebration: the end of this course and, for many learners, of the whole A1–C2 ladder. It shows each learner what they can now do: hear attitude, irony, and implication in extended speech; read a literary text for theme, voice, and technique; write an op-ed, a review, or a synthesis with authority; control the fine points of usage; and sustain an individual interview with a long turn, an abstract discussion under push-back, and a negotiation or diplomatic task with a register shift. It also gives you the evidence for the next step: C2 achieved (with exam entry, professional, teaching, and translation pathways as options), C2 with a review plan, or consolidation at C1/C2 with support. It is never a pass/fail verdict on a person.

FRAME IT AS "SHOW WHAT YOU CAN DO"

By Class 26 your learners have met you 25 times, and yesterday they delivered and defended a masterwork. Use that: "Thirteen weeks ago we were arguing about the difference between frugal and stingy. Yesterday you held a room, took a hard question, conceded the fair part, and kept your argument standing." Tell them plainly that this is not a proficiency exam and doesn't predict one: the Use of English section is written in the style of such exams, with original items, so that anyone thinking of sitting one sees the task types. Do every example item together, keep the room calm, and plan the celebration so it happens whatever the scores are. Every learner gets a certificate of attendance. The test decides the next step, not who gets to celebrate.

RUNNING CLASS 26 (90 MIN)

STAGE	TIME	INTERACTION	PROCEDURE
Welcome & set-up	4 min	T-S	Greet everyone. Remind them to skim the questions first and that several items accept more than one good answer. Papers go out face down; learners write their names.
Part 1 • Listening	14 min	T-S	Whole class. Give 45 seconds to read the Part A questions and 30 seconds for each later section, then read each script on the teacher pages twice .

Parts 2–4 · written	48 min	S	Individual work. Suggest a pace on the board: Part 2 Reading about 13 minutes, Part 3 Use of English about 11, Part 4 Writing about 24. Interviews run at the same time at a side table or in the hallway: call learners one by one for about 12 minutes each, which is 3 or 4 learners. Start with learners who finish Part 3 quickly, and let them finish their writing afterwards. If a volunteer or co-teacher is free, they supervise the room; if not, sit where you can see everyone.
Break	4 min	—	Collect papers. Set out snacks if your program allows.
Remaining interview + celebration	20 min	S–S · T–S	Finish one more interview while the class builds a " lifelong command " wall: each learner writes on a card the one habit they are committing to (a book, a room they'll speak in, a person they'll teach) and a word from this course they now own. Then certificates, a one-sentence farewell from each learner in any register they choose, a class photo if everyone agrees, and the next steps : exam entry for those who want it, specialist tracks, and the lifelong habits from Lesson 8.3. With more than four learners , book 12-minute one-to-one slots in the week before or after (Class 25 is too busy for interviews: you are chairing the masterwork discussions). Never shorten an interview below 10 minutes to fit everyone in; move it instead.

◆ YOU NEED

- ◆ One learner paper each (the middle section of this pack)
- ◆ Teacher pages: listening scripts, the interview script, the long-turn cards, the discussion statements, the task cards (cut), and one interview grid per learner
- ◆ The key and rubrics: assessment/assessment-key.html
- ◆ Certificates (the shared toolkit has a template), cards for the wall, and a timer

◆ WHAT EACH PART CHECKS

- ◆ Listening /15: a curator's talk heard for decision, stance, irony, concession, and image; a fast conversation between colleagues (sarcasm, understatement, a hedged refusal, slang); variety and contrastive stress
- ◆ Reading /15: an original literary passage read for theme, narrative reliability, symbol, imagery, juxtaposition, irony, a periodic sentence, and authorial purpose
- ◆ Use of English /25: original proficiency-style items: open cloze, word formation, five key word transformations (2 pts each), and the fine points of usage

- ◆ Writing /30: an op-ed, a review, or a two-source synthesis (about 300 words), scored with the writing rubric
- ◆ Speaking /15: an individual interview of about 12 minutes: a long turn, an abstract discussion with push-back, and a negotiation or diplomatic task with a register shift

LITERACY-ADAPTED VERSION

Same paper, different delivery. Read all instructions and items aloud, enlarge the paper, and give extra time or split it over two sittings. Parts 1–3: accept spoken answers (for the transformations, the learner says the completed sentence and you check it). Part 2: read the passage aloud twice. Part 4: the learner dictates the piece while you scribe, and you score it with the same rubric. Mark the paper "Adapted". For these learners the interview and listening are the main evidence; the key explains how to recognize C2 oral command without holding someone back for reading and writing alone.

YOUR SIDE, AN ASSIGNED SIDE, OR AN IMAGINED EXAMPLE

The interview asks for opinions and, in the long turn, sometimes for an experience. Some learners' experiences of moving between languages involve loss, a profession left behind, or a hard journey. Say before you start: "Real or imagined, general or personal: your choice. And in the discussion I'll argue against you on purpose. That's my job today, not my real opinion." Never ask follow-up questions about home country, family members who are absent, or immigration status. If a learner says "I'd rather not talk about that," thank them and move to the next stage.

LISTEN • CIRCLE • WRITE

A. Listen to part of a talk by Dr. Elena Voss, a museum conservator.

Circle the best answer, or answer briefly. You will hear the talk twice.

1 In the end, what did the museum do with the crack in the bowl?

a) filled it and painted over it

b) left it visible

c) replaced the bowl with a copy

2 According to the records, what kind of person made one of the earlier repairs?

3 A trustee called the bowl "a lovely piece, if you stand far enough away." What did the trustee mean?

4 "We took that under advisement." Dr. Voss's tone here is ...

a) dryly ironic: they politely set the comment aside

b) deeply hurt

c) sincerely grateful

5 What does she concede about invisible restoration?

6 "A museum that erases every scar is not preserving the past; it is airbrushing it." What does airbrushing suggest here?

7 When she says "Tellingly, the bowl has become one of the most photographed objects," she signals that ...

a) the detail reveals something that supports her argument

b) she is reporting a claim she doubts

c) she is changing the subject

8 Her overall attitude to visible repairs is ...

a) convinced and enthusiastic, while accepting exceptions

b) neutral: she simply describes both approaches

c) reluctant: she was overruled by colleagues

LISTEN • CIRCLE • WRITE

B. Listen to two colleagues, Jess and Omar, talking at the end of the day. Circle or answer briefly.

9 How did Omar really feel about the offsite day?

10 "The team-building bit was ... not our finest hour." He means it ...

went badly

went reasonably well was the best part

11 "I couldn't possibly comment." Omar implies that ...

a) it was Graham, though he won't say so outright

b) he doesn't know who it was

c) it definitely wasn't Graham

12 How does Jess respond to the offer to lead the project?

a) a polite, indirect no: she is unlikely to accept

b) an enthusiastic yes

c) yes, as soon as the audit is finished

13 Omar says he "lowkey" thinks Jess would "smash it." He means ...

a) he quietly but genuinely thinks she'd do brilliantly

b) he's worried she'd break something

c) he doubts she could manage it

LISTEN · CIRCLE

C. Listen to how each sentence is said, or what it assumes. Circle the answer.

14 Jess speaks British English. Where is she meeting Priya?

a) at street level, near the elevator

b) one floor above street level, near the elevator

15 "I didn't say we should cancel the conference."

a) I suggested doing something else with it, such as postponing it.

b) Somebody else said we should cancel it, not me.

READ Read the opening of a short story. Read it once for the surface, then again slowly for how it means.

The Clock

an original short story, written for this test

¶1 They gave me a clock when I retired, which I thought showed a certain sense of humor on the part of the accounts department. It is a handsome thing, walnut and brass, and it now stands on the mantelpiece, where it tells me, with great precision, the time I no longer need to know.

¶2 I want to say at once that I did not mind leaving. Thirty-one years is long enough in any building, and I had, in any case, been planning my departure for some time, or would have been, had the firm not planned it first. Nor was I in the least upset that Hollis, whom I trained, gave the speech. He spoke warmly, if briefly, and made only one small error about the year I joined, which hardly anyone would have noticed, and which I corrected afterwards, quietly, for the record.

¶3 Since then my days have acquired a pleasant looseness. I rise when I like. I walk to the river, where the gulls conduct their business with an urgency I remember. In the afternoons I read, or rather I hold a book, and watch the light move along the carpet like a slow tide going out.

¶4 My wife says I should find something to do. I tell her I am doing it. Last Tuesday, for no particular reason, I put on my good suit and walked as far as the corner of Fenwick Street, from which one can see the fourth-floor windows of my old office. Somebody had moved the plant. I stood there for perhaps an hour, an entirely reasonable length of time for a man enjoying the air, and then I walked home, and wound the clock, although it did not need winding.

1 The subject is a man's retirement. State the theme in one specific, arguable sentence. (2 points)

2 Is the narrator reliable? Give your view and quote one short phrase as evidence. (2 points)

3 What might the clock symbolize?

4 "watch the light move along the carpet like a slow tide going out" (¶3). What does this simile suggest about his days?

5 "the gulls conduct their business with an urgency I remember" (¶3). What contrast does this image quietly set up?

6 Paraphrase in one plain sentence: "I had, in any case, been planning my departure for some time, or would have been, had the firm not planned it first." (2 points)

7 "which I corrected afterwards, quietly, for the record" (¶12). What does this detail reveal about the narrator?

8 "Somebody had moved the plant." Why does the narrator notice, and mention, this detail?

9 "an entirely reasonable length of time for a man enjoying the air" (¶14). The effect of this phrase is ...

a) its self-justification makes us doubt him

b) it proves he was relaxed

c) it describes the weather

10 "and wound the clock, although it did not need winding." What is the irony or effect of this final gesture?

11 In ¶13, conduct (their business) means ...

carry out

direct an orchestra

transmit heat

12 The author's main purpose is ...

a) to make us feel, gently, a loss the narrator will not admit

b) to persuade readers to retire early

c) to satirize accounts departments

COMPLETE

A. Read the text. Write one word in each gap.

No translator, however gifted, can carry every shade of meaning (1) _____ one language into another. What gets lost is rarely the dictionary sense; it is (2) _____ the word does: the joke it makes, the class it signals, the memory it stirs. (3) _____ this reason, the best translators think less about words than about effects. They ask not only what a sentence says but what it is trying to do, and only when the answer is clear (4) _____ they reach for an equivalent. By (5) _____ large, readers never notice this work, (6) _____ is exactly as it should be.

COMPLETE

B. Use the word in capitals to form a word that fits the gap.

- 7 Her _____ to compromise brought the talks to an end. (WILLING)
- 8 His apology sounded so _____ that nobody believed a word of it. (SINCERE)
- 9 The committee's decision was entirely _____: no one saw it coming. (PREDICT)
- 10 The report was criticized for the _____ of several key figures. (OMIT)
- 11 Her _____ of the poem was subtle and persuasive. (INTERPRET)

TRANSFORM

C. Complete the second sentence so that it means the same as the first, using the word given. Do not change the word given. Use three to eight words, including the word given. (2 points each)

- 12 I couldn't understand the instructions at all. HEAD
I couldn't make _____ the instructions.
- 13 As soon as the curtain rose, the audience fell silent. SOONER
No _____ than the audience fell silent.
- 14 Everyone knew from the start that the committee would approve the plan. FOREGONE
The committee's _____ from the start.

15 People say that the director is planning to resign. SAID

The director _____ to resign.

16 The decision disappointed her enormously. BITTERLY

She _____ the decision.

CIRCLE D. Circle the correct answer.

17 Which sentence tells us the writer has only one sister?

a) My sister who lives in Denver is a lawyer.

b) My sister, who lives in Denver, is a lawyer.

18 Between you and I me, the proposal will never pass.

19 Which sentence is correct?

a) Having read the report, the conclusion seemed obvious.

b) Having read the report, I found the conclusion obvious.

c) Read the report, the conclusion seemed obvious to me.

20 The board recommends that she step steps will step down at the end of the year.

WRITE

Choose one task. Write about 300 words (270–330). Plan for 3–4 minutes first, and leave 3 minutes at the end to edit.

◆ OPTION A • AN OP-ED

Your city newspaper is inviting readers' op-eds on this question: "Should schools teach students to write with AI tools rather than ban them?" Write for the paper's general readership: open with a real hook, make your line unmistakable, concede the strongest objection and answer it, marry evidence to a human detail, and close on a line that lands. You may argue either side.

◆ OPTION B • A REVIEW

A cultural magazine is publishing short reviews under the heading "The work that changed how I see." Review a book, film, exhibition, album, or podcast (real or invented). Describe only enough to orient the reader, evaluate through specific, grounded detail, balance praise and criticism, and end with a clear verdict. No spoilers.

◆ OPTION C • A SYNTHESIS

Write an article for a school's newsletter for parents that brings together the two views below on handwriting and typing in class. Organize by idea, not source by source; attribute each view accurately with fair reporting verbs; show where the sources agree and diverge; and end with your own measured conclusion, clearly marked as yours.

Source 1 (a cognitive scientist, in a magazine interview): "When students write notes by hand, they cannot copy every word, so they are forced to decide what matters. That act of selection is where learning happens. Laptops make transcription easy, and understanding optional."

Source 2 (a learning-support teacher, on her blog): "For many of my students with dyslexia or motor difficulties, handwriting is not a route to understanding but a wall in front of it. Typing lets them keep up with the class. The question is not which tool is better, but which tool lets this student think."

It's tempting to think ..., but ...

The obvious reply is that ...

None of this is to deny that ...

What makes it remarkable is ...

For all its flaws, ...

Whereas X emphasizes ..., Y counters that ...

X's view is complicated by Y's point that ...

Taken together, these accounts suggest ...

PART 1 · LISTENING SCRIPTS

Give 45 seconds to read the Part A questions and 30 seconds for each later section. Read each script twice at a natural pace, with about 10 seconds between readings. Read Part A as a real talk: warm, unhurried, with the pauses marked. Notice that it mentions the wrong option first ("my first instinct was...") before the real decision, exactly as Lesson 8.1 warned. Don't signal the switch with your voice beyond what the words do. For Part B, change your voice or position for each speaker, or read it with a colleague, at a brisk conversational speed, with Omar's sarcasm flat and deadpan. In Part C, say the number, then the sentence once per reading, with the marked stress. Don't read the answer choices aloud.

◆ A · DR. ELENA VOSS, "WHY WE KEPT THE CRACK" (READ THE WHOLE TALK TWICE, THEN GIVE 1 MINUTE)

READ ALOUD

Good evening, and thank you for coming out on such a wet night. I'm told the umbrella stand downstairs is now, technically, an installation.

Tonight I want to talk about a single object: the blue-and-white bowl in Case Twelve, the one with the crack running right through the middle. When it came to us, three years ago, the obvious question was how to hide that crack. I'll be honest: my first instinct was to fill it and paint over it, so that visitors would see the bowl as it looked on the day it was made. In the end, though, we did the opposite. We kept the crack visible, and I want to explain why.

Arguably, a restorer's first duty is to an object's history, not to its original appearance. And this bowl's history includes that crack. The records suggest it was broken, and mended, at least twice, once by someone who, judging by the quality of the work, was not a professional, and cared about it a great deal. That repair is not damage to the story; it is part of the story.

Now, I'm not going to pretend everyone agreed. One of our trustees described the bowl as, and I quote, "a lovely piece, if you stand far enough away." (pause; dry) We took that under advisement.

Admittedly, there are objects where invisible restoration is the right choice: a painting, say, where the damage would distract from everything the artist intended. I'm not arguing that every crack is sacred. What I am arguing is that we should stop treating the marks of use as a kind of embarrassment. A museum that erases every scar is not preserving the past; it is airbrushing it.

Tellingly, the bowl has become one of the most photographed objects in the gallery. Visitors stand in front of it longer than almost anything else on that floor. Why? I suspect it's because a perfect object asks only to be admired, whereas a mended one asks a question: who loved this enough to fix it?

So when you walk through the galleries tonight, I'd invite you to look for the repairs rather than past them. They're the places where the objects are still talking.

◆ B · JESS AND OMAR (READ THE WHOLE DIALOGUE TWICE, THEN GIVE 1 MINUTE)

Jess: So, did you survive the offsite?

Omar: Just about. Eight hours of "blue-sky thinking" in a room with no windows. (flat, deadpan) Loved it. Honestly, best day of my life.

Jess: Ha. That good?

Omar: The team-building bit was... not our finest hour. Someone fell in the pond.

Jess: Tell me it wasn't Graham.

Omar: (a small smile in the voice) I couldn't possibly comment. Anyway, the big news is they want someone to lead the new client project. Any chance you'd be up for it?

Jess: Me? Oh... that's really kind of you to think of me. It's just, with the audit and everything, it might be a bit of a stretch right now. Let me have a think.

Omar: No pressure. I lowkey think you'd smash it, though.

Jess: You're sweet. Right, I'm off. I'm meeting Priya on the first floor, by the lift. See you tomorrow!

◆ C • VARIETY AND STRESS

READ ALOUD

Number 14: (Replay Jess's last line from Part B.) I'm meeting Priya on the first floor, by the lift.

Number 15: I didn't say we should CANCEL the conference. (Put strong contrastive stress on cancel; keep every other word light, with a slight fall-rise on conference, as if "...but I did say something else.")

INDIVIDUAL SPEAKING INTERVIEW • ABOUT 12 MINUTES

Sit beside the learner, not across a desk, with the grid on your lap. Speak naturally, at your normal pace. Ask the core question first; if there's no answer after about 5 seconds, use the support version; if the answer comes easily, add the stretch. At C2 you are listening for effortless precision and appropriacy: a long turn that is shaped and memorable, abstract reasoning that bends under challenge without breaking, idiom and register that feel chosen rather than learned, and tact that never blurs the message. Many C2 learners are near-native in some areas and fossilized in others (a stubborn article pattern, an L1 stress habit, one register they never leave). Score what you hear on each criterion separately. Don't correct during the interview. Before stage 1, let the learner choose a long-turn card and think about it quietly (about 1 minute) while you do the warm-up.

Warm-up: what's next

~1 min

SAY: Hello! So, now that the course is almost over, what are you going to do with your English next?
(real or imagined)

Support: "Work, study, reading, something else?" · Stretch: "And what, if anything, do you think you'll miss about learning it?"

2

Long turn

~3½ min

SAY: Please talk about the card you chose, for about two and a half minutes. I'll just listen.

Don't interrupt. Time about 2½ minutes; stop kindly at 3. Then ask one follow-up question about the content.

Support: if they freeze, "What's your main point?" then "Give me an example." · Stretch: "What's the most persuasive thing someone could say against you?" or "Say that last point again, as you'd put it to a skeptical expert." Listen for a hook and a resonant close, signposting that doesn't creak, a controlled figure or image, precisely placed stance markers (arguably, if anything, tellingly), and delivery that uses pause and stress for effect.

Read one statement below. Whatever the learner says, take the other side and push back twice, politely but firmly. Make the second push-back sharper: challenge an assumption, offer a counter-example, or slip in a mildly loaded question (Lesson 2.1) and see whether they refuse the premise. Your push-back is a role, not your opinion.

SAY: Here's a statement: [statement]. Where do you stand? ... Why? ... I'm not sure that follows. Surely [counter-argument]? ... But isn't that just [loaded reformulation]? ... So, on balance, where does that leave you?

Support: "Do you agree or disagree?" then "Why?" and one push-back only · Stretch: "Put the other side's case as fairly as you can." · "What would it take to change your mind?" Listen for concession without collapse, a refined final position, hedging calibrated to the argument, precise abstract vocabulary, and a presupposition noticed and declined ("That assumes..., which I'd question").

Negotiation or diplomatic task + register shift

~3½ min

The learner chooses one task card. Part 1 (about 2½ minutes): you play the other person and react naturally, with one real objection and one mild push. Part 2 (about 1 minute): ask for the outcome in two registers: the one-sentence version for the formal minutes, then the voice message to a friend.

SAY: (Festival director) Thanks for coming in. I have to say, our budget is basically fixed. What did you want to raise? ... Twelve percent? That's a very hard sell for us. ... What could you offer in return?

SAY: (Applicant) Thanks for calling. I've been waiting to hear. So, how did it go? ... Oh. Can I ask what the reason was? ... So is there any point applying again?

SAY: (New partner) Hi. Yes, sorry, I've been meaning to get back to you about Thursday. ... Well... it's quite challenging. ... What would you suggest?

SAY: (Switch) Thanks. Now, one sentence for the minutes, please. ... And the voice message you'd send a friend about how it went?

Listen for the moves of Lessons 7.1–7.2: acknowledge → counter, a conditional trade ("If you were able to..., then we could..."), a face-saving bridge, a difficult message stated clearly and early, then cushioned, and the hedge decoded as a refusal and repaired without blame. In Part 2, listen for two genuinely different registers, each internally consistent. Support: model the first line ("I'll be straight with you: I need to raise something difficult"). Stretch: push back a second time, harder, and see whether they stay calm and assertive.

Closing + your question

~½ min

SAY: Thank you, that's everything. Before you go, is there anything you'd like to ask me? About the course, what comes next, anything at all.

LONG TURN • STYLE

Plain or ornate?

"The plainest word is almost always the best one." Is it? When does ornament (a figure, a rare word, a long periodic sentence) earn its place, and when does it get in the way? Use examples from writing or speech you know.

LONG TURN • INTERPRETATION

A text that changed how you see

A book, film, speech, poem, or article (it may be imagined or described in general terms). Not just what it said, but how its craft worked on you: its voice, an image, a turn, its ending.

LONG TURN • MEDIATION

Something lost, something carried

A word, a joke, a proverb, or an idea that does not cross easily between two languages or cultures (yours, or ones you know about). What gets lost, and how would you carry as much as possible across?

LONG TURN • EVALUATION

The measure of mastery

Can any exam truly measure mastery of a language? What does a test capture well, what does it miss, and what would a fairer measure look like?

◆ DISCUSSION STATEMENTS (YOU CHOOSE ONE • TAKE THE OTHER SIDE)

- ◆ "A language you don't use every day isn't really yours."
- ◆ "Machine translation will soon make learning languages unnecessary."
- ◆ "Irony and understatement do more harm than good in international communication."
- ◆ "Everyone who speaks English as an additional language should aim to sound like a native speaker."

If the learner chose Writing Option A (AI tools in school), avoid the second statement so that the interview gives you fresh evidence. The fourth statement touches identity: use it only if you're confident the learner will enjoy it, and push back on the idea, never on the learner's own accent.

◆ TASK CARDS (CUT • THE LEARNER CHOOSES ONE)

NEGOTIATION • FORMAL → TWO REGISTERS

A price rise

You print the programs for a small arts festival. Your paper costs have risen 12% and you need a higher price. The festival director (your teacher) has a fixed budget. Negotiate a deal you can both defend. Then: one sentence for the minutes, and a voice message to a friend.

DIFFICULT MESSAGE • FORMAL → TWO REGISTERS

Not funded this time

You chair a small grants panel. Tell an applicant (your teacher) that their strong proposal was not funded this round: the reason was budget, not quality. Be clear and kind, and keep the door open. Then: one sentence for the minutes, and a voice message to a friend.

CROSS-CULTURAL REPAIR · FORMAL → TWO REGISTERS

"Challenging"

A new partner (your teacher) agreed to a Thursday deadline, then went quiet. You now suspect their "that would be challenging" meant no. Repair the misunderstanding without blame and agree on a realistic date.

Then: one sentence for the minutes, and a voice message to a friend.

INTERVIEW SCORING GRID

Score each criterion 0–3: 0 = no response · 1 = Not yet C2 · 2 = C2 · 3 = C2 strong mastery. Descriptors are in the assessment key. Total /15. Print one per learner.

Learner: _____ Date: _____ Long turn: _____ Task: ☐ Price ☐ Not funded ☐ Repair ☐ Adapted

CRITERION	WHAT TO LISTEN FOR	SCORE (0–3)
Task & coherence	A long turn with a hook, a clear spine, and a resonant close; a position that survives push-back or is refined honestly; a negotiated or delivered outcome that is clear; both registers delivered in stage 4
Precision & range	The mot juste; idiom and restricted collocation exactly right; abstract vocabulary for abstract ideas; complex grammar controlled even while attention is on the argument; errors rare and self-repaired
Register & pragmatics	Register chosen and held, then shifted cleanly in stage 4; stance markers placed precisely; a loaded premise noticed and declined; diplomacy that is firm on substance and warm on person
Interaction	Concedes the fair point and narrows to the real claim; picks up your hints and tone; proposes a conditional trade or a face-saving bridge; asks a genuine question at the end
Fluency & delivery	Natural, effortless flow; pauses only to choose the exact word; pause and stress used for effect; intonation that carries attitude (warmth, irony, reservation) in both registers

AFTER THE TEST

Score with the key and put written + speaking on the summary sheet. Score the writing with the rubric (/15) and double it for the paper total (/30). Tell each learner their next step privately and kindly before they leave, or at a short one-to-one the following week. Never read scores aloud. The key's "grade to outcome" table shows who has reached C2 (and who is ready to sit a proficiency exam if they want the credential), who goes on with a review plan, and who would benefit from consolidating at C1/C2 with support.
